The South.

Land of the gentle and the brave! Our love is as wide as thy woe, It deepens beside every grave Where the heart of a here lies low.

Land of the brightest of skies! Our love glows the more mid thy gloom, Our hearts, by the saddest of ties, Cling closest to thee in thy doom.

Land where the desolate weep! In a sorrow too deep to console; Our tears are but streams making deep, The ocean of love in our soul.

Land where the victor's flag waves Where only the dead are the free, Each link of the chain that enslaves Shall bind us the closer to thee.

Land where the sign of the cross, Its shadow of sorrow bath shed We measure our love by thy loss-Thy loss-by the graves of our dead.

SELECTED STORY.

A Rift in the Cloud.

A STORY FOR MARRIED FOLKS.

Andrew Lee came home from his shop where he had worked all day, tired and out of spirits; came home to his wife, who was also tired and out of spirits.

"A smiling wife and a cheerful homeparadise it would be!" said Andrew to himself. as he turned his eyes from the clouded face of Mrs. Lee, and sat down with knitted brows and moody aspect.

Not a word was spoken by either. Mrs. Lee was getting supper, and slie moved about with weary step.

"Come," she said at last, with a side glance at her husband.

Andrew arose and went to the table. He was tempted to speak an angry word, but controlled himself and kept silent. He could find no fault with the chop nor the home-made bread, nor the fragrant tea. They would have cheered his inward man if there had been a gleam of sunshine on the face of his wife. He noticed she did not cat.

"Are you not well, Mary?" The words were on his lips, but he did not utter them, for the face of his wife looked so repellant, that he feared an irritating reply.

And so, in moody silence, the twain sat together until Andrew had finished his supper As he pushed his chair back, his wife arose and commenced clearing off the table.

"This is purgatory!" said Lee to himself, as he commenced walking the floor of their little breakfast room, with his hands thrust desperately away down into his trowsers' pockets, and his chin almost touching his breast.

After removing all the dishes and taking them into the kitchen, Mrs. Lee spread a green cover on the table, and placing a fresh trimmed lamp thereon, went out and shut the door after, her, leaving her husband alone with his onpleasant feelings . He took a long deep breath as he did so; pansed in his walk, stood still for some moments, and when drawing a paper from his pocket sat down by the table, opened the sheet, and commenced reading. Singularly enough, the words upon which his eyes rested were "Praise your wife." They rather tended

"I should like to find some occasion for praising mine," How quickly his thoughts exeves were on the page before him, and he read

"Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake give her a little encouragement. It won't hurt

Andrew Lee raised his eyes from the paper and muttered, "O, yes fithat's all very well. Praise is cheap enough! But praise her for what? For being sullen, and making her home the most disagreeable place in the world?" His eyes fell again to the paper.

"She has made your home comfortable, your heart bright and shining, your food agreeable; for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have for ten years; but it will do her good for all that, and you too."

It seemed to Andrew as if this sentence was written just for him, and just for the occasion. It was a complete answer to his question. "Praise her for what?" and he felt it also rebuke. He read no further, for thought came too busy and in a new direction. Memory was convicting him of injustice to his wife. Ste had always made, his home as comfortable for him as her hands could make it, and had he offered the light return of praise or commendation? Had he ever told her of the satisfaction he had known, or the comfort he had ex- ters perienced? He was not able to recall the he read the sentence!

"A kind, gentle word, spoken in a gloomy house, is the little rift in the cloud that lets the sunshine through."

Lee struggled with himself a while longer. His own ill-nature had to be conquered first; his moody, accusing spirit had to be subdued. He thought of many things to say, yet he feared to say them lest his wife should meet his address with a cold rebuff. At last, leaning toward, her, and taking hold of the shirt bosom upon which she was at work, he said in a voice carefully modulated with kindness;

"You are doing the work beautifully, Mary." Mrs. Lee made no reply. But her husband did not fail to notice that she lost almost instantly that rigid erectness with which she had been sitting, nor that the motion of her needle ceased.

"My shirts are better made, and whiter than those of any man in the shop," said Lee, encouraged to go on.

"Are they?" Mrs. Lee's voice was low, and had in it a slight huskiness. She did turn her face, but her husband saw that she leaned a little towards him. He had broken the ice of reserve, and all was easy now. His hand was among the clouds and a feeble ray was already struggling through the rift it had made.

"Yes, Mary," he answered softly : "and I've heard it more than once what a good wife Andrew Lee must have." Mrs. Lee turned her ace towards her husband. There was light in it, and light in her eye But there was something in the expression of the countenance that a little puzzled him.

"Don't you think so?" she asked, quite so-

"What a question!" ejaculated Andrew Lee, starting up, and going round to the side of the table where his wife was sitting. What a question, Mary!" he repeated as he stood before her.

"Do you?" It was all she said

"Yes, darling," was his warmly spoken answer, and he stooped down and kissed her. for the more efficient government of the rebel How strange that you should ask me such a

"If you would only tell me so now and then, Andrew, it would do me good." Mrs. Lee breast of her husband, stood and wept.

What a strong light broke in upon the mind of Andrew Lee. He had never given his wife even the small reward of praise for the loving interest she had manifested dally, until doubt of his love had entered her soul, and made the light around her thick darkness. No wonder that her face grew clouded, nor what he considered moodiness and ill-nature, took possession of her spirit.

"You are good and true, Mary, my own dear wife; I am proud of you-I love you, and my to increase the disturbance of mind from which first desire is for your happiness. O, if I could always see your face in sunshine, my hone would be the dearest place on earth."

"How precious to me are your words of bye | pressed that ill-natured sentiment. But his and praise, Andrew," said Mrs. Lee, smiling up through her tears into his face. "With them in my ears, my heart can never io in

How easy had been the work for Andrew Lee. He had swept his hand across the clouly horizon, and now the bright sunshine was streaming down, and flooding that home will
